To my friend, Hannah, who convinced me to write this.

Home

Home is the place where you can chill out and feel comfortable doing anything.

You usually lay yourself out on that leather sofa of yours (that you keep forgetting to sell on Craigslist because there's a stain you still can't get out from when your son had that little accident) and watch Meet the Parents marathons while eating half a tub of ice cream and a bag of Doritos.

Home is that place where you spend five hours covering up everything you've done with your life when your relatives visit for the weekend.

It's where that bed you want to crawl back into is when you have to wake up early and go to work.

This is where you start your day, where the heart is, where WLBZ2 keeps trying to convince you their News Center is.
